

- Enabling individuals to advocate for themselves.
- Advocating on their behalf when they have been discriminated against or denied a service to which they are entitled.
- Promoting policies and services which respect their choices.”

Ms. Stevenson stated that to be eligible for P&A services an individual must have a disability and must have experienced discrimination due to the disability or denied a service that they are entitled to. Regardless of eligibility, the general public may contact them at any time with questions or to report a possible discrimination.

Ms. Stevenson explained that there are four levels of services available to customers. The first level of service is information and referrals and serves as the first point of contact for most customers. The second level is case representation, which is where P&A gets directly involved, to determine whether or not they can assist a customer based on their situation. In this level of service, details are uncovered regarding the situation of possible decimation as well as to educate and encourage the customer in self-advocacy. If determined and needed, P&A becomes directly involved in advocating on behalf of the customer by attending meetings. At level three, P&A looks to make system changes that will benefit all of those with disabilities. They observe patterns that indicate that there are complaints repeatedly regarding a business, agency, or other facility and will seek to change policy on behalf of those with disabilities with that organization’s management group. The fourth level, which is where Ms. Stevenson works, is the Self-Advocacy, Training, Education and Outreach group. They often participate in training local organizations regarding disabilities and attending job fairs to raise awareness.

P&A works in teams organized around these levels of service. The Outreach and Information team works to respond to issues, provides information to the public and customers as needed, makes referrals, conducts intake for the issues team, and conducts outreach. P&A has Spanish-speaking and ASL fluent staff available. The two issues teams are Protection & Independence, which looks specifically at abuse, neglect, exploitation, and other types of investigations on behalf of those with disabilities as well as encouraging independent living. The equal access team ensures that those with disabilities have the same access to services, places, and goods that the general public has access to. They have gotten calls for assistance with advocating on behalf of parents with students with a disability, as well as those that are in the hospital that need an interpreter. Ms. Stevenson states that P&A advocates on behalf of Spanish speakers as well. Occasionally, they receive issues surrounding service animals regarding what a person can be asked in regards to their service animal; typically, these issues can be resolved with education to the organization or facility. P&A also receive questions from employers regarding guidance on what they are required to provide for accommodations. Sometimes employers hesitate to hire those with a disability because they believe the accommodation will be too expense to make. They also assist with college and university accommodations as well as social security overpayments, and services from Vocational Rehabilitation and the Commission of the Blind.

The Governor has recently transferred the Client Assistance Program (CAP) from SC Vocational Rehabilitation to P&A. CAP specifically assists clients of Vocational Rehabilitation, the Independent Living Centers, and the SC Commission for the Blind. The transitions are scheduled to take place at the end of August 2017.

Ms. Stevenson also shared that P&A advocates on behalf of customers to obtain Assistive Technology that is needed through agencies that provide the technology. P&A also has some funding that assists those with a Traumatic Brain Injury, although strokes do not qualify under this heading.

IV. WorkLink's Data

Vice Chair Pruitt asked Ms. Graham to give an overview of the WorkLink data given in the committee packet. Ms. Graham referred the committee to the WIOA Targeted Population Summary seen on page 4. Ms. Graham stated that this was a summary for the entire program year (July 1, 2016 to June 30, 2017), and shows the individuals served through the SC Works system based on various demographics and barriers to employment, specifically those with a disability. Ms. Graham noted that there were 11 individuals using our services last year that disclosed that they had a disability. Their average wage was $7.25 upon exiting the program.
